DONALD D. TRUNKEY, MD

Dr. Trunkey is Professor and past Chair of the Department of Surgery at Oregon Health Sciences University (OHSU). He is regarded as an internationally renowned trauma surgeon, and is one of the first surgeons to incorporate the concepts of preventable death methods and evidence-based practice in support of trauma systems. He shares his expertise and vast experience in research, education and trauma care with OHSU staff and patients by remaining active on the trauma call schedule. He remains an advocate for improved trauma care throughout Oregon and the United States. Dr. Trunkey attended Washington State University for his undergraduate degree and the University of Washington Medical School. Uncertain about medicine or surgery as a career, he chose to do a rotating internship with Dr. Bert Dunphy at the University of Oregon. After one month on the surgical service, there was no question of what career to pursue. Following his internship, he spent two years in the United States Army as a general medical officer in Germany. Upon completion of his military duties, he rejoined Dr. Dunphy at the University of California, San Francisco, where his general surgery training was completed. He spent one year in the Organ Preservation Laboratory with Dr. Folkert Belzer. Following his general surgery training, he spent an additional year with Dr. Tom Shires at Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas, Texas, where he was involved in a National Institutes of Health special fellowship in trauma. Following completion of his fellowship, he returned to the University of California, San Francisco, where he became very involved in the care of trauma patients. He was Chief of the Burn Center at San Francisco General Hospital and also had an extensive interest in elective vascular surgery and non-cardiac thoracic surgery. He established a laboratory to study mechanisms of shock at the cellular level with a special interest in myocardial performance following shock, lung injury, and cellular immune mechanisms following injury. In 1978, he became Chief of Surgery at San Francisco General Hospital and in April 1986, he assumed the Chair at Oregon Health Sciences University Department of Surgery. His intent is to build a general surgery residency based on all the primary components of general surgery. His own special interest remains trauma surgery.

Dr. Trunkey's extensive bibliography includes 179 publications, 204 chapters, and 26 books.
